Why Your Business Needs to Market Online

Did you know that 94% of consumers research products online before buying? Or that three out of five people use search engines as a go-to shopping resource?*

There is no longer any doubt that buyers go online to research and purchase products and services. Companies that have websites and market online can reap the rewards of connecting with these shoppers.

The hardest part of doing anything can be getting started, so create your game plan now to start getting the payback from marketing online. Here’s how:

Set your goal
Online marketing can do many things for your business. Choose one or two objectives for starters. For example, do you want to drive visitors to your website, generate more foot traffic to your store or restaurant, or gather emails for a newsletter?

Identify your target
Be clear about the buyers you want to reach. What do they care about most? What are their problems? Have they purchased from you before? Are they currently buying from a competitor? Also consider their gender, hobbies, location and other specifics; these can all help you determine the best ways to reach them, as well as the messages that will work best.

DID YOU KNOW?

The good news for your business is that online marketing doesn’t have to be complicated, time-consuming or expensive. Consider that:

- Online outreach often costs less than offline efforts.
- Launching new campaigns can be lightning fast – meaning that potential customers will see your campaign quickly.
- Changes and updates can be made instantly, usually at minimal cost.
- Measurement tools quickly show what’s working and what’s not.

Learn about current customers
If you have a website, ask your current customers how they found it. If not, ask them where they go online now. This insight can help you focus your efforts.

Check out competitors
Just because a competitor is doing it doesn't mean it works – but it might. Reviewing what your competition is doing can help you create your own unique approach.

Set a strategy
Taking the time to think through your plan before you begin can dramatically improve your results. Choose one or two tactics that work within your budget, make sense for your audience and that you can commit the time to manage effectively. Many successful online marketers take a “test and refine” approach to get the greatest payback.

Track your results
Online marketing makes it easy to measure program performance; take advantage of this by closely monitoring the response to your marketing programs. Increase your investment in the programs that work well and revise components of programs that aren’t working as well as you would like to see how your program improves.

SPOTLIGHT
Twiddy & Company Realtors (www.twiddy.com) in Duck, North Carolina, wanted to increase the number of online bookings for its vacation properties. Using search advertising, they increased bookings 50%.
From affiliate marketing to online classifieds, there are many ways to build your business online. Here’s a look at ten popular online marketing options:

1. Local listings and classifieds. Create your business listing on listing sites such as Citysearch to ensure that consumers searching for nearby businesses find yours. Some listings allow you to promote offers such as sales and new products. Customer review sites are basically local directories like Yelp that allow users to express their opinions about businesses.

2. Search advertising. Search advertising is a method of placing online ads on Web pages near search engine results. With AdWords (www.google.com/adwords), you can deliver your message at the moment someone is searching for the type of product or service you offer. Choose keywords that relate as closely as possible to your offerings so you receive the most likely prospects. For CPC ads, you pay only when someone clicks on your ad.

3. Contextual ads. Contextual advertising takes display ads to the next level, by placing them on sites related to your offerings; for example, if you sell sporting goods, your ad may perform better on sports-related sites. Services are available that automatically distribute ads to sites based on the content of those sites.

4. Display ads. You’ve probably seen the dancing aliens; that’s a display, or banner, ad. Do-it-yourself display ad builders, including Google’s AdWords display ad builder (www.google.com/displaynetwork) can help design your ad. You can also distribute your display ad via ad networks and ad management systems.

5. Geotargeting. Geotargeting simply means advertising to prospects in specific locations—which could be very useful, for example, if you sell dresses only in Dallas. One way to get started is to create a listing on Google Places (http://places.google.com/business).
6. Group buying. Connect with new customers through programs that offer multiple buyers collective purchasing deals. There are many popular group buying sites available to use.

7. Mobile marketing. Many smartphones and mobile devices provide web browsing, GPS, cameras and video capabilities. This means you can develop creative promotions with text messages and location-based social networks.

8. Social networking sites. Cultivate new business through social networking sites where members share stories and recommend products and services.

9. Affiliate marketing. Affiliate marketing lets you get other businesses to drive prospects to your website. Some affiliates may allow you to set up a store on their domains, such as comparison shopping sites.

10. Online videos. Reach new audiences by posting videos on video-sharing sites. The best videos tend to be short (less than three minutes) and have an offer, such as a free copy of a report or a product discount, to motivate viewers to take action. MobileDemand is one of many small businesses with a YouTube channel to help spread company news and information.

HOT TIP
Promote specific products in your ads. People who research model numbers online are usually closer to making a purchase.

HOW MUCH SHOULD YOU SPEND ON MARKETING?

The amount varies by industry, business size and how much you want to grow your business.

The Small Business Administration and SCORE® (Counselors to America’s Small Business) put it at between 2% and 10% of sales.

Depending on your business model, you could spend half of your marketing budget on offline (print ads, brochures, telemarketing) and half on online (search marketing, display ads, mobile). The more online oriented your business is, the more you should consider increasing your online spending. Your return on investment (ROI) will depend on your offer and who you reach out to (current customers or prospects).
Measuring Your Results

Online marketing generates a wealth of data to let you assess and refine your marketing programs. Start with these easy-to-track performance measures:

Website analytics
Dig into your visitor data to see where your most promising leads come from. The quality of your traffic usually trumps quantity – for example, a referral site that delivers four buying customers may be worth more than one that delivers 50 window shoppers. Google Analytics (www.google.com/analytics) is a great place to start, and it’s free.

Clickthroughs
The basic measure of an online ad’s impact is how many people click on it to visit your site. Clickthrough rates are often strongest with a compelling visual, message or offer, combined with placement on the right sites.

Conversions
How many people who see your ads “convert” into buyers or take a specific action, such as subscribing to your newsletter? Take a look at your conversion rates to help determine which outreach efforts are most cost-effective.

Phone Number Tracking
Using a unique phone number in your ads lets you see exactly how many calls your campaign has generated. Platforms like AdWords Call Metrics (www.google.com/ads/innovations/callmetrics.html) make this easy by assigning a different number to each campaign. This feature, which lets you track calls by ad and shift your spending, provides clear evidence that online marketing can lead to real leads, customers and offline success.

Landing pages
A landing page is any page on your website where traffic is sent specifically to prompt an action. For example, you might create different landing pages for different display ads. Landing pages let you customize your message and track program performance accurately. Keep the landing page simple — if you want visitors to buy, make that the focus of the page; don’t distract them with newsletter links, webcasts, blogs, Facebook links or cute puppy videos.

WATCHOUT
Changing your marketing tactics too frequently may diminish your long-term results.

When Suzanne Golter opened her dog day care and boarding business in an Oakland, California, warehouse in 2004, she knew she had a cheerful and healthy space for dogs. Happy Hound featured innovations like a state-of-the-art ventilation system, and a webcam so owners could check on their pets. Now, Golter just needed customers. As a one-woman show, spreading the word had to be something she could manage by herself.

Action

Golter knew that many potential clients would search online for a service like hers, so she created a Google AdWords account and began posting short ads. “I set up my primary means of advertising in one sitting,” she says.

Golter first used AdWords’ geographic targeting to cast a wide net, but she quickly scaled back to focus on the Oakland-San Jose area. She also tried an email newsletter and ads in national dog-related magazines, but found that they didn’t perform as well.

Golter also claimed her Google Places page and updated her information, and she likes to use social media to interact with customers. She posts photos of dogs and promotes Happy Hound events and fundraisers on social networks and she has received dozens of customer reviews on online review sites.

Results

Today, Happy Hound is filled with dogs, and Golter has a long waiting list. AdWords accounts for 90% of her business, bringing in about 40 new clients each month. “AdWords helped me grow so quickly here, I know that when I expand, it will help me fill my next facility,” she says.

Online Marketing: Something for Every Business

Online marketing success stories can sometimes leave a small business owner wondering if it would really work for them. What if you don’t have a website — can you still reach customers online? What about online-only companies? Fear not. With all the online marketing options available, one (or more) is likely to help almost any business. Here are strategies to help four particular kinds of businesses. Use them to help start or improve your online marketing efforts.

STOREFRONT BUSINESS

*Main Street is full of companies with a prominent storefront and no website. Gift shops, restaurants, wine stores and other storefront businesses can use an online presence to drive offline success. Try:

2. Promoting your business on customer review sites.
3. Creating a blog.
4. Offering incentives for location-based activities, such as visiting your store multiple times.*

LOCAL BUSINESS

*Traditional companies – plumbers, real estate agents and the like can gain loads of payoff from online marketing by making it easy for customers to find them. Try:

2. Submitting your site to online directories. Don’t forget any trade organizations you belong to.
3. Using social media to connect with target customers and prospects.
4. Setting up a search advertising account and place a geotargeted ad.*

ONLINE-ONLY BUSINESS

*Online retailers can spread the word about their offerings, stay connected with customers and keep traffic flowing in the virtual door with online marketing. Try:

1. Creating a blog.
2. Sending a newsletter.
3. Making a banner ad and place it on an ad network.
4. Starting an affiliate program.*

ONLINE & OFFLINE BUSINESS

*For businesses that are online and offline – think a bed and breakfast or a toy store – the sky is the limit for attracting business and connecting the two. Try:

2. Collecting email addresses from physical visitors to start an e-newsletter.
3. Distributing online coupons through your website.
4. Setting up a search advertising account and place a geotargeted ad.*
Online marketing terminology can seem like a new language. Let us translate for you.

Ad Group: A collection of ads within a campaign that corresponds to a group of related keywords.

Ad Network: An advertising company that connects businesses wanting to run ads with websites that will host ads. Ad networks sell and serve most banner ads.

Affiliate Marketing: A marketing tactic in which one company pays another for each visitor or customer brought by its marketing efforts.

Banner Ad: A type of ad, usually with graphics, that appears on a web page and links to an advertiser’s website.

Campaign: A component of your account that allows you to focus your advertising on specific products or services. Each campaign can contain multiple ad groups.

Clickthrough Rate (CTR): The number of clicks an ad receives divided by the number of times the ad is shown.

Contextual Advertising: A type of advertising based on the content displayed to the user.

CPA, CPC, CPM: Cost per action / acquisition (CPA) is an online payment model by which advertisers pay for each action completed because a visitor clicked on their ad. With cost per click (CPC), advertisers pay for each ad clickthrough. With cost per thousand (CPM), advertisers pay for every 1,000 impressions.

Flash: A software plugin that enables browsers to play multimedia animations, such as video.

HOT TIP
If you want to try group buying, be ready to offer significant discounts — sometimes more than 50%.
Geotargeting: A method of delivering online ads based on the physical locations of web surfers.

Google AdWords: Google’s advertising program based on cost-per-click pricing.

Group Buying: When a group of consumers come together to leverage the group’s size in exchange for discounts on products or services.

Impressions: The number of times an ad is viewed. One impression is one banner ad displayed on one web page.

Keyword: Words used for a given ad group to target potential customers.

Landing Page: A web page where visitors are taken after they click on an ad or a search result. This may be a website home page or a unique page developed specifically for a marketing campaign.

Negative Keyword: Specific terms that you can exclude in paid search results. For example, if you select “free trial” as a negative keyword, your ad will not show as a result of any search including both “free” and “trial.”

Rich Media: A type of technology that includes graphics, audio or video within an ad.

Search Engine Marketing (SEM): The practice of promoting a website through a search engine.

HOT TIP
Ask advertising partners how you can receive more from their services. Chances are they can tell you about successful strategies from other clients.

WATCHOUT
Don’t focus your ad on the features of your products or services. Instead, communicate the benefits your potential customers will receive.
Worksheet: How to Get Started
