DECLARATION OF CHAD HURLEY IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

CHAD HURLEY, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, hereby declares as follows:

1. I am one of the three founders of YouTube and its Chief Executive Officer.

The following facts are true of my own personal knowledge and if called and sworn as a witness, I could and would testify competently to them.

2. Steve Chen, Jawed Karim and I first discussed the idea of launching a video site in early 2005. The concept we developed for the YouTube website was straightforward. From its earliest days, we intended YouTube to be a platform that would give users a convenient way to share personal videos and build a community around posting and viewing those videos. Users would upload their videos by visiting the YouTube website, creating an account, and then selecting a video file from their computer to upload to YouTube's computer servers. Visitors to YouTube would be able to view videos they and others had uploaded to the website. We envisioned YouTube as a free service and it has always been one; it does not charge users to upload or view videos. This vision of YouTube is what we created in 2005 and what exists today, albeit on a scale beyond what we could have ever imagined.

HIGHLY CONFIDENTIAL

3. At first, we envisioned that users would post homemade videos with a dating focus, like hotornot.com, except with users posting videos of themselves instead of pictures. See Ex. 1 hereto, a true and correct copy of a February 22, 2005 email from Jawed to Steve and me.

4. By the time of the site's beta launch on April 23, 2005, the idea evolved into a more generalized hub for short, personal videos that would cause users to think of us as "the Yahoo of videos" or like "Flickr" (a photo-sharing service) for videos. See Ex. 2 hereto, a true and correct copy an email that I sent April 3, 2005 to Steve and Jawed; Ex. 3 is a true and correct copy of an April 1, 2005 email from Jawed to me and Steve.

5. We wanted users to "feature 'You' in the video ... be creative, be fun, be original, be whatever." The entire focus was on videos that were personally created. See Ex. 4 hereto, a true and correct copy of an April 25, 2005 email from Steve to me and Jawed; Ex. 5 hereto, a true and correct copy of an April 26, 2005 email string among me, Steve, and Jawed ("We are a site that features creative videos from personal users. It can be dating-oriented or creativity-oriented. We will not restrict.").

6. As I wrote in an email to Steve and Jawed, "so we aren't a film site, but a personal video clips site, for people to upload, store, search, and share their personal video clips. . . . I want real people, real videos.” See Ex. 6 hereto, a true and correct copy of an email from me to Steve and Jawed dated April 29, 2005.

7. We decided upon the name “YouTube” for our site because we envisioned the site as a destination for users to upload and broadcast videos of themselves. See Ex. 7 hereto, a true and correct copy of an April 17, 2005 email from Jawed to me and Steve (“The videos you upload should be about you (hence, YouTube!”)). Our company slogan, “Broadcast Yourself,” was also designed to convey the same message; as Steve said, it was a “succinct and exact slogan” for what we wanted the site to be about. See Ex. 8 hereto, an April 25, 2005 email from Steve to Jawed and me.

8. Prior to the launch of YouTube, we decided to reject any videos that appeared on the site in violation of one of the following rules:

- Video must be about YOU
- Video must be appropriate for all audiences
- Video cannot contain contact information
- No copyrighted material

See Ex. 9 hereto, a true and correct copy of an April 20, 2005 email exchange among Jawed, Steve and me discussing those rules. Further, from its inception, the Terms of Service of the YouTube site, the online agreement covering the service, prohibited users from uploading material that violated the copyrights of others.

9. To encourage users to upload creative videos of themselves on the site, we put an ad on Craigslist (an online classifieds service) seeking people to post videos of themselves meeting two requirements: “a) videos must be interesting! b) videos must be created by you!” See Ex. 10 hereto, a true and correct copy of an April 28, 2005 email from Steve to Jawed and me. Other ads that we put out in those early days focused on our slogan, "Broadcast Yourself", and invited users to share videos of personal thoughts, feelings, ideas, and expressions.

10. One user who saw our ads wrote us to say how much she appreciated the YouTube service. The user told us that her son-in-law was serving in Iraq, and her daughter was using YouTube to share videos of the couple's baby with him while he was overseas. I thought this was a great example of what YouTube was all about, and the types of videos that we wanted to see on the site. See Ex. 11 hereto, a true and correct copy of a July 18, 2005 email string among me, Steve, and Jawed where I wrote "this is exactly what I'm targeting, people that will add videos (video bloggers, people looking for free video hosting, etc.) so it's not really to generate traffic just good active users." (ellipsis in original).

11. Although we wanted YouTube to offer a wide range of videos and promote free speech, we did not want videos with pornography or unauthorized copyrighted material on the site. See Ex. 12 hereto, a true and correct copy of a April 28, 2005 email from Steve to Jawed and me ("As long as there's no nudity or copyrighted materials, we should NOT be removing videos because it doesn't meet any personal preferences."). Steve felt that "it would be cool" if we could give users reasons for rejecting their videos; "there are three [reasons] I can think of right now: -duplicate video—inappropriate content—copyrighted material." See Ex. 13 hereto, a true and correct copy of a June 29, 2005 email from Steve to Jawed and me.

12. In July 2005, Steve and I had an exchange about a popular video site called filecabi.net that was similar to stupidvideos.com and big-boys.com in that they were all focused on hosting silly or prank-oriented videos. In that exchange, I described our vision for what we hoped YouTube would become, and what it in fact did become: “I would really like to build something more valuable and more useful . . . actually build something that people will talk about and changes the way people use video on the internet.” Steve replied: “another thing, still a fundamental difference between us and most of those other sites. we do have a community and it’s ALL user generated content.” See Ex. 14 hereto, true and correct copy of an email string between me and Steve dated July 29, 2005 (ellipsis in original).

13. In August 2005, we put together a presentation outline for Sequoia Capital, a prominent venture capital firm that expressed interest in funding our company. In that presentation outline, we described our “Company Purpose” as follows: “To become the primary outlet of user-generated video content on the Internet, and to allow anyone to upload, share, and browse this content.” See Ex. 15 hereto, a true and correct copy of the Sequoia Capital presentation outline dated August 21, 2005 (emphasis in original).

14. That same month, when my brother Brent Hurley signed on as an employee of YouTube, he sent us an email describing the site as he found it at the time: “I think the ‘slices of life’ content our users provide is so unique. YouTube is reality TV at its best and most pure form. The database of content already collected amazes me.” See Ex. 16, a true and correct copy of an email string among Brent Hurley, me, and other YouTube employees dated August 7, 2005.

15. As the YouTube site began to get more uploads in the summer of 2005, we started to come across situations where we encountered videos uploaded by users that were potentially unauthorized. For example, in one instance, I saw a video that looked like a network television show. Steve, Jawed and I are not lawyers. As a small start-up working out of my garage during early and mid-2005, we did not have lawyers to advise us on copyright issues. But we viewed the posting of potentially unauthorized material as a problem, and we agreed that we wanted to put a stop to it. See Ex. 17 hereto, a true and correct copy of a June 26, 2005 email thread among Steve, Jawed and me.

16. As a founder with a significant stake in the company, the last thing I wanted was for it be seen as or to become a haven for infringing or illegal content. The options we envisioned for YouTube were the standard evolutionary paths for a startup: an initial public offering, or acquisition by another company. We all believed that those options would not be available to us if our business was based or dependent upon illegitimate activities.

17. To make sure that is not how the site developed, when we started seeing an uptick in the number of videos uploaded to the site, we adopted a screening process to remove videos that we guessed were unauthorized copyrighted content, and told users that such content was unwelcome. See attached hereto, true and correct copies of emails among Steve, Jawed, and me in July and August 2005: Ex. 18 (“[I] just unapproved and rejected the britney toxic music video.”); Ex. 19 (“this guy has a ton of music videos that need to be removed.”); Ex. 20 (noting that user uploaded clips from a Hong Kong movie and concluding “I think we should reject all that [stuff].”); Ex. 21 (adding videos for review because “this is blatant copyrighted stuff”). As I put it in response to an inquiry from a user about why a video was rejected: “Yes, I believe this was a music video, right? So, it was rejected because it was copyrighted material. We are trying to build a community of real user-generated content and moving forward we are going to be more proactive about screening videos upfront.” See Ex. 22 hereto, a true and correct copy of an email I wrote dated July 3, 2005.

18. Despite our efforts, we quickly learned that this screening process was not scalable and was ineffective in identifying unauthorized material. Among other things, we realized that we were regularly making mistakes and taking down videos that actually were authorized and had been uploaded by the content owner. As a result, we ceased engaging in this practice as a general matter.

19. In the meantime, we were devising strategies to encourage users to post authorized material. For example, in the upload process, we added spaces for users to provide the date and place at which they recorded the video they were uploading. We intended that to signal to users that the site was constructed for personal videos that they themselves had recorded. See Ex. 23 hereto, a true and correct copy of a June 26, 2005 email string among Jawed, Steve, Mike Solomon and me.

20. By September 2005, we added a community flagging feature that allowed users to flag inappropriate and unauthorized copyrighted content. See Ex. 24 hereto, a true and correct copy of a September 6, 2005 email from Steve to all YouTube employees. Because we were concerned about ordinary users' ability to determine whether particular videos were uploaded to YouTube with or without permission, and because we were uncertain of the legal implications, we decided to eliminate the community flagging feature for copyright. However, it remained our express policy to actively discourage copyright infringement, to remind users in our standard communications that they needed to own all copyrights to the materials they uploaded to the site, and never to promote or encourage the posting of unauthorized material. See Ex. 25 hereto, a true and correct copy of an email from me to Steve and Jawed dated September 25, 2005. ("we should never promote piracy or tell them how to do it. we should respond saying the canned response, you should own all copyrights to the material you upload.").

21. In September 2005, we secured a commitment for our first venture capital investment from Sequoia Capital. We also engaged outside legal counsel to assist us in enhancing our copyright protection efforts on the site. We posted additional information on the site setting forth our prohibition on unauthorized copyrighted material, informed users that posting such materials would result in the termination of their account, and displayed clear instructions to copyright holders on how to provide notice to our designated agent of allegedly unauthorized materials that users had uploaded. Shortly thereafter, we formally registered our agent with the U.S. Copyright Office. See Ex. 26 hereto, a true and correct copy of our agent registration, signed by me, and cover letter.

22. As shown by a description of YouTube that I drafted in October 2005, our plan for the site continued to center on personal, user-generated video clips. It had nothing to do with encouraging or capitalizing on copyright infringement:

YouTube is a new service that allows people to easily upload, tag, and share personal video clips. Digital cameras with video recording capability are quickly becoming a commodity consumer technology. As people continue to record more video clips, YouTube will fill the need of quickly distributing their content worldwide.

See Ex. 27 hereto, a true and correct copy of an October 26, 2005 email that I sent to my brother, which encloses this description.

23. YouTube became enormously popular in a short time. At the time YouTube officially launched its service in December 2005, it was receiving more than 6,000 new video uploads each day, and its users were watching more than 2.5 million videos each day. By February 2006, the number of uploads had jumped to 20,000 per day, and users were watching more than 18 million videos per day. In the month of July 2006, users uploaded over 2.1 million video clips to the site, and watched more than 3 billion videos. By December 2007, users were uploading more than 300,000 videos each day and site traffic had soared to 800 million daily video views. By July 2008, uploads had reached more than 400,000 per day. See Exs. 28 & 29 hereto, true and correct copies of site statistics for the YouTube service.

24. During this period of rapid growth, we continued to go out of our way to respect the copyrights of content owners. For example, when a "Saturday Night Live" skit entitled "Lazy Sunday" was uploaded to YouTube in December 2005 and drew an enormous amount of views from users, I reached out to NBC to determine whether the video was authorized to be on YouTube. See Ex. 30 hereto, a true and correct copy of the email that I sent to NBC.

25. Although I contacted NBC on December 28, 2005, YouTube did not hear back about NBC's position regarding the video until February 3, 2006, when I received a letter from NBC thanking us for opening a dialogue and asking that YouTube remove the Lazy Sunday video from our website. See Ex. 31 hereto, a true and correct copy of NBC's response to me.

26. YouTube is now the world's fourth largest Internet site. Site traffic on YouTube has soared to over one billion video views per day. Today, more than 24 hours of new video are uploaded to the site every minute—that is almost four years worth of new video created every day.

27. Not only have the volume and range of videos uploaded to YouTube exceeded our expectations, but our community of users has too. YouTube users don't just post videos to YouTube and watch videos on YouTube, they interact with one another through YouTube. They form friendships, ask each other questions, invite responses, find organ donors, participate in contests, rally in support of one another, and challenge each other. Our users have used YouTube to create a new model for how individuals, companies, organizations and governments communicate. Its development has been both astonishing and humbling, and it has come without us ever seeking to grow the site or earn revenue from any unauthorized use of copyrighted material.

I certify under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States that the foregoing is true and correct.

Subject: Strategy: please comment

Product design:

The site should look good, but not too professional. It should look like it was thrown together by a couple of guys. Note that hotornot and friendster, while easy to use, don't look professional, and yet they've had enormous success. We don't want to look too professional because it scares people off. Subconsciously, if it looks professional, people think it's expensive to use.

The most important aspect of the design is ease of use. Our moms should be able to use the site easily.

Timing/Competition:

I think our timing is perfect. Digital video recording just became commonplace last year since this is now supported by most digital cameras.

There is one site I'm aware of: stupidvideos.com, that also hosts videos and allows viewers to rate them. Luckily the site hasn't caught on very much. We should discuss why this is the case, and why we expect our site to gain more traction.

Note that they have the simplest possible implementation: they simply host AVI and MPEG files, just like mpegnation.com, a site that hosts videos for use in auctions. Auto-converting uploaded videos to flash will set us apart from the rest, especially if the flash player is slick.

Site Focus:

Our focus should implicitly be dating, just like hotornot. Note that hotornot is a dating site without seeming too much like one. This puts people at ease. I believe that a dating-focused video site will draw much more attention than stupidvideos. Why? Because dating and finding girls is what most people who are not married are primarily occupied with. There are only so many stupid videos you can watch.

Also, most people have little motivation to post their own "stupid" video. Such videos are pretty difficult to make: you have to do something stupid, which might be embarrassing or painful, and it requires planning. And what's the payoff? Even if your video is popular, what do you get out of it?

A personal dating-video however is easy to put together, and the reward is clear: potential contacts from people who want to date you. People will be motivated to put up their videos, and it takes a minimal time investment to do so.

The fact that stupidvideos.com is thriving, making 14k/mo, and having been around since 2001 is a big encouragement. It shows that such a site does in fact work, despite bandwidth cost concerns, and I believe we can far exceed the popularity of this site. We should look at them closely, for example see what ISP they are using, and possibly call their ISP to see what rate they paying for bandwidth.

Rollout:

Although we want our product to get out ASAP, it must be ready for primetime. Our design and features should be superior to stupidvideos when we launch. Before public launch we should have a private launch, which requires a password to access the site. During the private launch phase we should encourage our friends to populate the site with dating-oriented videos. This way, when we launch to the world, visitors will know what kinds of videos they should upload.

Private launch target date: May 15th.

Okay, cool. I think we're all in agreement then.

So, Chad, if you can figure out a way to blend together the two, HotOrNot and Flickr, into one common site, let's hear it! One problem I saw with the channels was that it's not just about channels but like all the features/payment models would be different too, you know?

It seems like you're pretty opposed to the idea of two different sites though. Why is that? I'm curious.

Yahoo of videos, I like it.

Yes, I see your point. I thought that our site would become the hub of short, personal videos and we could have channels to separate the differences. We would be the Yahoo of videos in a way.

Lets get together as soon as we can and really talk about this. But I think we are all on the same page to launch our current product as is. We need to figure out where we are going down the road.

Chad and I were discussing today that the focus of the site should be more like flickr. Basically a repository for all kinds of personal videos on the internet. Just like flickr. The dating may emerge implicitly, but after thinking about it more, I think that forcing dating would limit potential. We could certainly encourage dating content through pre-population of such content.

But generally I think we just want to be a "video bin", just like flickr is a picture bin... anything, whatever. Just an easy way to post videos.

Like flickr, we should also target the blogging community (early adopters) with APIs and with flash HTML snippets they can embed in their blogs.

So I believe that we should think much more like flickr than hotornot.

Yes. We want to force users to feature "You" in the video. That's it. Be creative, be fun, be original, be whatever.

A blend of both Flickr and Hot-or-Not. Hot-or-Not always has pictures of you. But it's always just a straight pose. We want videos of you, but it could be doing anything -- a talent, a hot pose, a dance, whatever.

I completely agree with everything you said. I also have received that feedback from many people -- the "straight/bi-sexual" thing is too forced.

We may not be able to figure everything out tonight, but that's ok.

We also should be careful to not drastically change our model every two days, or without actually seeing the user reaction on a bigger scale than 20 users.

Right now I think we should not be as dating-centric. Many people have told me that the "straight/bi-sexual" thing seems too forced.

We just want people to have fun, we shouldn't FORCE them into dating. How about just a small change, and allowing people to select non-dating interaction with people.

Hey guys,

I was thinking... looking for creative people to post videos and targeting sites like this for inspiration is only going to make us into another movie site, like ifilm or atom films. I really think we should focus on real personal clips that are taken by everyday people. We'll still allow short films like this, but I think what would set us apart from all the other movie sites out there, would be the flickr aspect... so we aren't a film site, but a personal video clips site, for people to upload, store, search, and share their personal video clips.

To compare this to the photo idea in another way, we wouldn't be a professional stock image site, but a personal photo site, like shutterfly, snapfish or ofoto.

I just really don't want to become another ifilm or atom films. I want real people, real videos.

Subject: YouTube FAQ - for Chad

Q: What kind of videos can I upload?

A: The videos you upload should be about you (hence, YouTube!). Show off your unique style, talents, hobbies, or anything else about yourself you want to share with the world. We don't allow any nudity and your video must be appropriate for all audiences. Videos which violate these rules will be removed.

Q: How many videos can I upload?

A: You can have a maximum of five videos on the site. You can always upload more videos by deleting one of your older videos.

Q: How long can my video be?

A: There is no time limit on your video, but the video file you upload must be less than 50 MB in size.

Q: What video file formats can I upload?

A: YouTube accepts video files from most digital cameras in the .AVI, .MOV, and .MPG file formats.

Q: How can I make my videos more entertaining?

A: We encourage you to spice up your videos by using simple video editing software such as Windows MovieMaker (included with every Windows installation), or Apple iMovie. Using these programs you can easily edit your videos, add soundtracks, etc.

yes, i completely, completely agree.

the "broadcast yourself" is such a succinct and exact slogan for what we want.

This is why I think the "broadcast yourself" slogan must be central to the site, and to the design. It needs to appear somewhere.

That way people will understand what the site is supposed to be when they visit.

YouTube.com is in need of creative content! Unleash your creative side and earn $20 in the process!

YouTube.com is a web-based community based around creative and fun videos. We are seeking folks who possess a dash of technical know-how and a truckload of flare.

If you are female or an extremely creative male between the ages of 18 to 45 and if you have a digital camera that can create short video clips, please follow these steps to earn $20:

1. Visit the website at www.YouTube.com and sign up for a new account.
2. Contact steve@youtube.com with the username you used to sign up.
3. Upon approval, upload 3 different videos of yourself. There are some simple requirements for the videos we'd like to see:

- a) videos must be interesting!
- b) videos must be created by you!

4. After uploading the videos, please send another email to steve@youtube.com. You will consequently receive $20 via PayPal.

Our hope is that this experience will not much of your time and you'll have a bit of fun in the process. Of course, we'd prefer it if you would continue to use the site and help grow out this budding community.

Hey.

As long as there's no nudity and copyrighted materials, we should NOT be removing videos because it doesn't meet any personal preferences. If I can stress one additional minor requirement, the videos should (at this point) be something everyone would want to watch. I'm saying this after I learned that a video was removed because your parents were viewing the site. The goal is for the site to be successful and not parentally approved. The other thing, what did your parents think of that guy dancing around in his underwear?

Anyway, I can't stress enough how important it is to get creative videos in there to seed the system. I see it as Flickr starting out. How did Flickr get the creative folks to go to their site to submit their pictures? I'm convinced it wasn't by seeding their database with 100 initial pictures that no one wanted to see. You know?

I just finished the outline. It took me quite a while to write this, but I would feel very comfortable to present this. I took everything into account that you guys mentioned previously.

I fired it off to Roelof, but told him it's still preliminary. I'll be discussing it with Roelof tomorrow on the phone.

Your feedback please.

Note: I tried hard to exclude anything that's not really relevant to someone like Mike Moritz. There's more we can say, but the more we add, the harder it becomes to read.

YouTube

Company Purpose:

To become the primary outlet of user-generated video content on the Internet, and to allow anyone to upload, share, and browse this content.

Problem:

Video content is currently difficult to share:

- Video files are too large to e-mail (E-mails with video attachments bounce).
- Video files are too large to host (viewing just fifty videos at 20 MB each means serving 1 GB of bandwidth – exceeding most website quotas).
- No standardization of video file formats. To view many video file formats means having to install many different video players and video codecs.
- Videos exist as isolated files. There is no interaction between viewers. There is no interrelation between videos.

Solution:

Consumers upload their videos to YouTube. YouTube takes care of serving the content to millions of viewers.

YouTube's video encoding backend converts uploaded videos to Flash Video, which works in any web browser supporting Flash. (Flash penetration is 97.6% of Web users according to Macromedia.com.) Flash Video is a highly compressed streaming format that begins to play instantly. Unlike other delivery methods, it does not require the viewer to download the entire video file before viewing.

YouTube provides a community that connects users to videos, users to users, and videos to videos. Through these integrating features, videos receive more views, and users spend more time on YouTube. Because these features are similar to Flickr, YouTube is often referred to as "the Flickr of Video".

Market Size:

YouTube's growth will come as a result of these recent developments:

- Digital video recording technology is for the first time cheap enough to mass-produce and integrate into existing consumer products, such as digital photo cameras and cell phones, giving anyone the ability to create video content anytime, anywhere. As a result, user-generated video content will explode.

- Broadband Internet in the home has finally reached critical mass, making the Internet a viable alternative delivery mechanism for videos. Viewers are flocking to the Internet because it offers more variety of content and allows people to choose when and how to see it. Traditional media want to enter this space because they want to follow the audience, and because content there is cheaper and easier to distribute. Early examples of video content that has reached more viewers on the Internet than on television: Indian Ocean Tsunami videos, Jon Stewart's Crossfire appearance, Janet Jackson's Superbowl wardrobe malfunction.

Initially, YouTube will target home-grown (user-generated) video content, because in the short term that represent the fastest-growing type of video content, possessing the fastest-growing audience. This phase will enable YouTube to establish itself as the dominant player for Internet video content. Once YouTube's audience reach rivals that of traditional media networks, it will then be positioned to syndicate traditional media content (news, entertainment, MTV, etc) as well.

Competition:

Big players:

- Google Video – going after Hollywood, not personal videos
- 24 hour laundry – going after pure video hosting technology, not community

Small players:

- dailymotion – good technology, no exposure
- vimeo – bad technology, has potential for exposure (owned by CollegeHumor)
- PutFile – focuses on file hosting, lacks community, bad revenue model

Product Development:

Demo basic functionality.

- Community
 - o Connects users to videos. Users find videos through:
 - Search
 - Related videos
 - Related tags
 - Top rated, top viewed, most discussed
 - User videos,
 - User favorites
 - o Connects users to users:
 - Video discussion groups
 - Video comments
 - Private messages
 - Private/public video sharing

- Social networking (Friends)
 - User videos
 - User favorites
 - Connects videos to videos:
 - Related videos
 - Related tags
- Open architecture
 - Developer XML APIs
 - RSS feeds
 - Externally embeddable video player (“YouTube off YouTube.com”). By letting people embed YouTube videos right into their own web sites, YouTube’s audience reaches even beyond YouTube.com
- Target vertical markets with a need for video content:
 - Auction videos for eBay items (perfect for eBay Motors)
 - Real estate videos for houses/apartments for sale/rent (“Do-It-Yourself MTV Cribs”)
 - Become the video platform for special interest websites: Car sites, Sports, Politics, etc
- Features currently in development:
 - Community features: groups, sharing, better ways to find videos
 - Driving external reach: external player, developer APIs

Sales & Distribution:

Revenue-generating options:

- Ads:
 - “Google Adwords” approach for YouTube: Allow advertisers to upload ad videos to YouTube. Thumbnails of these ad videos will be shown alongside other videos in video search results, and as “related videos”. As with Google Adwords, ad videos will only be shown when relevant, and will be clearly marked as ad videos.
 - Display interactive ads within the Flash video player, superimposed over the playing video.
 - Play a short video ad at the beginning of the actual video.
 - Display an ad image at the beginning of the actual video.
- Act as a for-pay distribution channel for promotional videos:
 - Events, conferences, concerts
- Charge members for premium features:
 - Ability to download original videos / view high resolution videos

- Video editing features (within the browser, using Flash): video effects, transitions, titles, etc
- Advanced features for the externally embeddable video player
 - Offer specialized features for embedded auction/real estate videos (see Product Development)
- Charge viewers for premium content:
 - Allow members to sell their video content to YouTube viewers, with YouTube taking a cut of the proceeds.

Metrics:

Launched June 11th. Has already overtaken all previously existing competitors and is now the dominant player in this space.

Team:

Founders:

- Steve Chen:
 - Recruited by Max Levchin as one of PayPal's first engineers
 - University of Illinois, Computer Science
- Chad Hurley:
 - PayPal's first designer, responsible for PayPal site design, logo
- Jawed Karim:
 - Graduate student in Computer Science, Stanford University cool guys. yeah, i really think this is the best thing to do moving forward.... stopping it now, before it becomes a big problem down the road.

and once we build in paging and a tool to reject videos after they've been approved, i want to review all the old videos.

Hello,

Yes, I believe this was a music video, right? So, it was rejected because it was copyrighted material. We are trying to build a community of real user-generated content and moving forward we are going to be more proactive about screening videos upfront. Some early video uploads were not properly screened, so you may see some violations on the current site. We are going to be reviewing and removing these shortly.

Thanks for your email and let us know if there is anything we could do improve our service. We look forward to more videos from you, by you of course. ;)

yes, this will be very cool and I have already add "date recorded" to our playgrounds. i think, because we will focus more on personal videos, this makes a lot of sense. and just by having the fields on the video upload page will discourage adding copyrighted material.

chad/christina, can you guys take a look at flag_video.php and update that page so it looks okay?

i just put in a few things in there to get you the information you'd possibly want -- title, author name, whether you're flagging it as inappropriate or copyrighted, the stills of the video, and finally, a comment box. after you hit submit, it takes you back to the video.

fyi: i don't know if we responded to this guy, but we should never promote piracy or tell them how to do it. we should respond saying the canned response that you that you should own all copyrights to the material you upload.

anyway, just wanted to bring up the issue to avoid legal issues. :)

YouTube description:

YouTube is a new service that allows people to easily upload, tag, and share personal video clips. Digital cameras with video recording capability are quickly becoming a commodity consumer technology. As people continue to record more video clips, YouTube will fill the need of quickly distributing their content worldwide.

My Bio:

Chad Hurley is the president and CEO of YouTube. Chad has an experienced background in web development and graphic design. He was the first member of the PayPal design team, where he lead efforts to develop the interface for the original Palm-based program that enabled secure wireless money transfers between handhelds. As the product evolved, he effectively designed auction features which solidified PayPal's long term success and is a credited member of two =critical auction patents. Chad looks forward to building an empowering video service for the world.=

I don't believe it was posted with our consent. I will check, but can't imagine we'd have allowed it.

Thanks for reaching out.

Hi Marc,

I am the CEO and co-founder of YouTube, a website that allows users to watch and share videos. It was brought to my attention that the Saturday Night Live clip "Lazy Sunday" was posted on our site last week. Although we assume that users posting content to our site hold all necessary rights to do so, I wanted to proactively reach out and make sure this was the case.

This video has become extremely popular on our site with well over 1 million views in a week. But if this was posted without your consent, we can immediately remove the video at your request. Also, if you would wish to continue the clip's massive popularity, we would be happy to continue streaming this content with your approval.

I understand you deal with NBC's PR. I was hoping you could potentially provide us with some direction on how NBC would like to proceed. Either way, it would be very interesting to explore possible ways to replicate this exposure with future clips. I look forward to hearing from you.

Best, Chad Hurley

Re: NBCU Content on YouTube.com (the "Site")

Dear Mr. Hurley:

I write as counsel for NBC Universal, Inc. ("NBC Universal") in response to your email to Marc Liepis of December 28, 2005. As you are aware, NBC Universal is the owner of all rights in the show Saturday Night Live, including the copyright in the "Lazy Sunday" video clip notably featured on your Site. We thank you for opening a dialogue with us and for agreeing in advance to remove our content from the Site.

Specifically, you ask whether NBC Universal has consented to the posting of the "Lazy Sunday" clip by YouTube users on your Site. NBC Universal has not authorized these postings and we thank you for agreeing to remove them.

We must also address the additional NBC Universal materials posted, displayed and archived on your Site. The YouTube Site offers thousands of pages featuring NBC Universal materials. Searches for "SNL" and "Saturday Night Live" alone result in literally hundreds of Saturday Night Live video clips of varying length. A brief review of your Site also shows that you are offering our copyrighted materials from the following additional NBC Universal properties: Will & Grace, The Tonight Show with Jay Leno, Late Night with Conan O'Brien, Surface, Dateline, The Today Show, and Law & Order. None of these postings is authorized by us. This list is of course not exhaustive but merely representative. We would be happy to work with you to identify NBC Universal properties.

The television programs that appear on NBC Universal's broadcast, cable and broadband channels are produced and owned by NBC Universal or licensed for its exclusive distribution. Copying, distribution and displaying images or video from NBC

Universal's news and entertainment programs without permission constitutes an infringement of NBC Universal's copyrights and other rights in its programming.

We accordingly ask that you remove these NBC Universal copyrighted materials, including still images, video and audio, from the YouTube service and take steps to prevent further display and distribution by YouTube of content that is owned or licensed by NBC Universal and that is posted without our consent, consistent with your Copyright Policy, your December 28 email and, of course, the law.

Finally, please be advised that this letter is not intended to be a complete statement of the facts or legal issues regarding this matter, nor as a waiver of any of NBC Universal's rights or remedies, whether at law or at equity, all of which are expressly reserved.

I would be pleased to further discuss any aspect of this subject.

Very truly yours,

Steve Kang
